The Practice

Felixstowe Road Medical Practice is situated on the eastern side of Ipswich in an extended Edwardian building. The Practice area primarily covers east Ipswich plus a number of villages. Our Practice population is approximately 10,500. In addition to our own practice team, we currently provide accommodation for our district nursing team and rooms for visiting midwives, mental health workers and a specialist diabetic nurse.

The Training

Dr Andrew Hall is our nominated trainer however all partners, the nursing staff, the practice manager and the rest of the support staff will be involved in the training to some extent. The development of all of our staff is a central part of our ethos. In addition to your core clinical training, you will also have the opportunity to find out about the business side of General Practice.

You will undertake weekly tutorials lasting 2 hours and attend weekly lunchtime meetings some of which are business orientated and others that are educational in nature. There will also be daily debriefing sessions on clinics held which will be taken by all the team. The main place for learning however will be through the experience of managing real patients in clinics.

Yourself

We will provide an environment and support which both encourages and is suitable for you to learn the skills needed to be a good 'General Practitioner'. In return, we expect a commitment from you to learn, and if you want to, participate in the development of the practice. We hope you will enjoy your time at the practice.
